Child Development Network is Proud to Announce the

"CDN CARES PROGRAM"

Directed by Dr. Renee Folsom of Johns Hopkins-Kennedy Krieger Institute

CDN CARES
the Center for Autism Research Education Services

The goal of this center is to use state-of-the-art knowledge in the proper diagnosis of autism and to include evidence-based practice into targeted educational and related services.

- Current estimates indicate that 1 out of 88 children age 8 years will have an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD).
- Every day new therapies crop up that claim to "cure" autism, and this makes it difficult for parents to decipher scientifically proven therapies that address the symptoms of autism from simple quackery.

CDN is proud to welcome Renee Folsom, PhD. She brings a wealth of experience and expertise working with children, adolescents, and adults at Johns Hopkins-Kennedy Krieger Institute's Center for Autism and Related Disorders and UCLA's The Help Group. She joins a team of dedicated professionals at CDN who will strive to help your child achieve his or her personal best.
